[LEXINGTON, KY] – [OCTOBER 20, 2026] – Dean Dorton, a leading accounting and business advisory firm and an Intuit ProAdvisor, today announced the availability of Intuit Enterprise Suite (IES) to help growing businesses manage increasing financial complexity, improve visibility and scale with greater confidence.

As an Intuit ProAdvisor, Dean Dorton works closely with businesses using Intuit's financial technology to help them optimize their systems, improve processes and use financial information to make better business decisions. The addition of IES expands that capability, giving Dean Dorton clients a more robust option when their business needs begin to outgrow their current QuickBooks environment.

“Being a ProAdvisor is much more than knowing how to use QuickBooks,” said John Wurtenberger, Managing Director of Business Consulting Services at Dean Dorton. “It means understanding how our clients use technology to run their businesses and helping them get more value from it as they grow. Intuit Enterprise Suite gives us another tool to do that. When a client’s business becomes more complex, we can help them evaluate what’s next without automatically forcing them into a completely different technology ecosystem.”

Intuit Enterprise Suite creates another path. IES provides capabilities designed for growing and more complex organizations, including:

- Multi-entity financial management and consolidation
- Multi-dimensional reporting across departments, locations, products, projects and other areas of the business
- Project and profitability management
- AI-powered automation and financial insights
- Advanced reporting and business intelligence
- Connected financial and business workflows
- A familiar Intuit experience for businesses already using QuickBooks

The platform is designed to help businesses gain greater visibility and control while reducing the manual processes that can accompany increasing financial complexity.

What being a ProAdvisor means for clients

For Dean Dorton clients, the value of the ProAdvisor relationship goes beyond software expertise. It means having a partner who can help determine what financial technology makes sense for the business today and what may be needed tomorrow and the advantage of significant discounts rather than purchasing directly from Intuit.

Dean Dorton's advisors work with clients to understand their business, their growth plans and the challenges they face. That allows the firm to identify when a client's current technology is working well, when improvements can be made within the existing environment, and when a more advanced solution such as IES may be appropriate. As advisors they want to help people understand the value of AI-native ERPs that simplifies the complexities of scaling, eliminating the need for companies to adopt costly, legacy ERPs or juggle multiple applications to manage their operations.

That objectivity is central to Dean Dorton's ProAdvisor relationship. Rather than approaching technology as a product to sell, the firm approaches it as a tool to help clients operate more effectively and make better decisions.

Helping businesses grow without unnecessary disruption

For existing QuickBooks clients, IES provides an opportunity to add capabilities as their businesses become more complex while remaining within the broader Intuit ecosystem. That can be particularly valuable for businesses experiencing:

- Expansion into multiple entities or locations
- Increasing consolidation and reporting complexity
- Heavy reliance on spreadsheets or manual processes
- Growing demands for more detailed financial and operational reporting
- Acquisitions or other significant business changes
- A need for better visibility into profitability and performance

Dean Dorton's team can help clients evaluate their current environment, identify areas for improvement, determine whether IES is a fit, and support implementation and ongoing optimization.
