

September Cloud Bytes Webinar on Going Paperless

ARTICLE 09.12.17 DEAN DORTON

Imagine saving time for everyone in your company. Imagine the filing cabinets and cubes emptied of endless messy stacks of paper – or not having to sift through all of them hoping to find that audit detail from last fiscal year. Better yet, imagine saving your teams from having to spend countless hours knee-deep in archives to find one small customer detail.

When forward-thinking businesses transition to a digital workflow, they experience benefits they may never have considered, such as more in-depth collaboration, heightened client and company information protection, a more organized and professional workspace, and less liability threat resulting from lost documents.

While it's no secret creating a paperless environment saves on money, space, time and resources, but when companies think about the uncharted territory of moving from a conventional to a paperless environment, many decision-makers stop dead in their tracks for fear of disrupting workflow, or causing more work to provide a system that is designed to improve efficiency.

If you've been putting off the conversation in your office, or digging in your heels, awaiting more answers, we've got a free Cloud Bytes session that will clue you in on everything you need to know to take that step into a more efficient and effective work environment for everyone involved.
